Veteran Industry Analyst to Lead Telsyte into New Era

Sydney, 1st February 2006 – Telsyte, Australia’s leading telecommunications market research and strategic consulting firm, has announced the appointment of veteran industry analyst Warren Chaisatien as its new Managing Director.

With over a decade of international telecommunications industry experience, Mr Chaisatien joined Telsyte on 1st February 2006, after spending the last six years covering the Australian and Canadian telecommunications markets. Well known for his thought leadership and practical advice to industry players, Mr Chaisatien will be responsible for taking Telsyte’s success to the next level by expanding its coverage into new and exciting areas including wireless, IP and end-user research. Mr Chaisatien is a recognised authority in the mobile and wireless space.

“Warren’s experience and his proven leadership in the industry make him the perfect fit to lead Telsyte into a new era”, says Dominic Quai, CEO of Gibson Quai – AAS, Telsyte’s parent company. “Our goal is to provide the best telecommunications research, market intelligence and high-impact advice to our clients, and with Warren leading the company, we know our clients are getting the best”.

Prior to joining Telsyte, Mr Chaisatien served as Research Manager at IDC, where he spearheaded various IDC-first research and consulting initiatives, and won multiple awards for outstanding insight and thought leadership. He also had four years of sales and marketing experience with IBM Asia Pacific’s Communications Sector. Mr Chaisatien holds a master’s degree in engineering management from the University of Technology, Sydney.
